UVALDE PRODUCTION CREDIT ASSOCIATION RE-ELECTS OFFICERS.

James Amberson of Hondo was re-elected to a three-year term as a member of the Board of Directors of the Uvalde Production Credit Association at the annual meeting at Uvalde Monday, January 18, 1937.

The Association embraces several counties adjacent to Uvalde and has grown from a membership of 86 at the end of 1935 to 118 at the end of 1936. It has assets of $587,867 and has outstanding obligations, including loans to members of $461,000, totaling $473,141, leaving a total net worth of $114,726.

Geo. C. Jolley of Uvalde, Vice-President of the Association, was also re-elected a Director with Mr. Amberson. J. H. Ashby, Jr., President, and R. H. Alvey, Secretary and Treasurer, are the other officers.

Several reports and short addresses by officers and members were made, these being climaxed by a speech by Mr. Lee from the head office at Houston in which he gave a comprehensive and lucid explanation of the entire process of the Association's functioning.

The Managing Editor, who accompanied Mr. Amberson as his guest, noted among members present from this section, besides Mr. Amberson, Messrs. J. R. Chancey, local loan agent, Toby Koch, A. L. HISTORICAL DRAMA COMING.

Inspired by Tennyson's immortal poem of valor, "The Charge of the Light Brigade" is a thrilling historical drama scheduled for the Colonial Theatre Wednesday and Thursday.

The story opens in 1850 on the northern border of India, where a powerful chieftan, Surat Khan, makes war on the British when he is informed that his allowance from the government is to be discontinued.

Exciting incidents follow, including the massacre of Chukoti and the Crimean War, in which the 27th Lancers, as a unit of the Light Brigade, make their famous charge. The cast includes Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Patric Knowles, Henry Stephenson, Nigel Bruce, Donald Crisp and many others.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE MEETS.

Pursuant to the call made at the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce on Wednesday night, January 13th, there was a general meeting of all members of the Chamber held at the High School Auditorium Wednesday night, January 20th.

The meeting was presided over by President J. G. Barry who introduced Miss Wilma Spratt and the High School Glee Club, and a pleasing program of vocal and piano selections was rendered.

Following the musical feature of the evening the body got down to an informal discussion of business.

After considerable discussion, it was decided to hold a regular monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce each second Tuesday night of the month. Dr. T. B. Knopp, Alfred Schwaers and N. C. Johnson were appointed as a committee on securing a permanent place for meeting, arranging for a plan of meeting, with a possible merging of the luncheon club with the meetings of the Chamber of Commerce.

On a motion from the floor Prof. J. G. Barry, Judge Arthur H. Rothe, District Attorney R. J. Noonan, Commissioner Alfred A. Bader, and Representative Joe R. Monkhause were appointed a Highway Committee with a special view to securing concessions from the railroad company for right-of-way and the assistance of the Highway Department in widening Highway 90 through the town of Hondo.

The body adjourned to meet on the evening of the second Tuesday of February at the pace to be announced later by the committee.

ST. PAUL'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.

"How often should I go to church?" We assume that one who asks this question implies that he goes to church to worship, not merely to take up space on the pew, or to be entertained or to meet with kin and acquaintances. We take it that he goes to hear the Word of God, and be edified and fed with spiritual thoughts and motives. If that is the case, then there can be only one answer: as often as the word is preached, and one is physically able to be there.

The body needs food regularly, and so does the soul. An employer once asked a girl in the office in a rather jocular manner how she had spent the previous night. He knew she lived the right life. "What makes you want to live the way you do?" Her answer was simply: "Because I think right." There you have it, her thoughts were nourished by the Divine Word and directed by God's Spirit. When, figuratively speaking, souls are stumbling along in a spiritual way, it is a sign of lack of the means of grace. We cannot neglect a God-given means of growing in knowledge and grace without harming ourselves thereby. And to those who preach His Word, Jesus gives the encouraging statement: "He that heareth you heareth Me; and he that despiseth you despiseth Me; and he that despiseth Me despiseth Him that sent Me."

Service next Sunday, Jan. 24, German at 10:30; Bible class and Sunday school classes at 9:00 A. M.

English service Sunday, Jan. 31, and Feb. 7 at 10:30 A. M.

Regular mid-week services will be held during Lent, beginning Ash Wednesday, Feb. 19, at 7:45 P. M.

RECENT BRIDE HONORED.

Mrs. Ray Worley of Uvalde, who before her recent marriage was Miss Eleanor Heyen of Hondo, was complimented with a shower and tea Monday afternoon, from 2 to 5 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Fritz Schwaers. Hostesses were Mesdames Fritz Schwaers, A. J. Schroeder, Minnie Fuos, A. H. Schwaers, Clarence Wright of Freer, Horace Schwaers, Frank E. Schwaers, Wayne Harlie, and Jack Bradley of San Antonio, and Miss Lucille Boon.

The living room was simply arranged with fern and greenery, and against this background Mrs. Fritz Schwaers, the honoree, Mrs. Worley, and her mother, Mrs. F. A. Heyen, received the guests. Miss Boon and Mrs. Wright were in charge of the bride's box.

The lovely gifts were on display in an adjoining room, where Mrs. Fuos and Mrs. Schroeder were in charge.

The dining room was softly lighted with pale green lamps and held as center of interest the tea table, which was laid with a handsome Italian cut work cloth. An attractive center arrangement of the table was a white pottery bowl of white geraniums and fern on a mirror plaque and flanked on each side by tall green tapers in white pottery holders. Refreshments consisted of cherry pie with whipped cream, coffee and mints. The remaining members of the house party alternated in serving.

The honoree wore a becoming cape frock of grey wool with paisley blouse and her corsage was of yellow narcissus. Mrs. Heyen, the honoree's mother, wore a silk print dress of spring floral design and a corsage of red carnations.

YOU TOO WILL FIND IT PAYS.

Gentlemen: I have leased the N. W. Ward ranch, so you will not run the ad. again.

I had fine results from your service, and will probably patronize you again, from time to time.

Yours very truly,

J. W. FULLERTON.

RESETTLEMENT WORK IN MEDINA COUNTY.

Dallas, Jan. 20, 1937.—Medina County farmers aided by the Resettlement Administration are making notable progress in their "live-at-home" program, it was stated here today by D. P. Trent, regional director of the Resettlement Administration, after examining the annual report for this county made by C. W. Price, rural supervisor.

Out of the 134 families receiving loans in Medina County, 110 were reported as having grown sufficient vegetables for their use the past year. One hundred and thirty were reported as having sufficient poultry, 95 as having sufficient milk and butter from their own cows, and 95 as making cheese. More than 11,000 quarts of vegetables and fruit were put up by these families, and 1,675 pounds of meat were stored.

Although practically all of these families were farm tenants, rather than owners, they improved their temporary homesteads by planting 37 shrubs, finished the walls in 6 houses, they made 25 mattresses and renovated 36 mattresses, made 32 quilts and renovated 42.

Mr. Price's report was made jointly with Myrtle K. Montgomery, rural supervisor of home management plans for Medina County.

Loans totaling $43,478 were made by Resettlement Administration to 134 families in Medina County during 1936. Most of the amount loaned was expended for teams, tools and other so-called "recoverable" goods, the remainder being spent for consumable supplies such as food, clothing, medicine, food, etc. Forty-five per cent of the amount loaned has already been repaid, although the loans were made to run from one to five years. Average repayments for the state were 26 per cent.

Twenty-four Medina County borrowers have repaid their loans in full and only 9 made no repayment. The average borrower received a loan of $324.46 and has repaid $145.04.

MARRIED HERE.

Miss Mary Alyce McNeill and Mr. David Cook, both of Three Rivers, Texas, were married at the Methodist parsonage in Hondo Saturday night, January 16, 1937, at 8:25 o'clock. Rev. W. S. Highsmith, pastor, performed the ceremony. Misses Bernice Chancey and Genevieve Brucks of Hondo and Mr. Paul Humphrey of Three Rivers were the witnesses.

The bride wore a blue tulle suit with grey accessories and her corsage was of white gardenias.

The young couple are friends of Miss Chancey who has visited in Three Rivers on several occasions. They will make their home in that city.

QUIHI NOTES.

And the man bowed down his head, and worshipped the Lord. Gen. 24: 26.

Veni, vidi, vici (I came and saw and won), was the triumphant message of Caesar after a gallant victory; another leader, looking over his followers, boasted, Arm in arm with you, I challenge my whole century; and still another made the honest confession, Another victory like today, and the war is—lost. David, the king, after his enemies were subdued, proudly arranged for a census, a conceited mustering up of his forces; the Roman kings had the public well-pipes and fountains spout wine during a fortnight for the thirsty populace after every victory; other kings had the church bells ring out the glad news; today, while dripping thousands shouted themselves warm and dozens of hands turned loose their best and their noisiest marches to electrify and cheer the masses and the conspicuous uniformed representatives of the world, the central figure in this inauguration fete, the president, with his family went into seclusion to the church where they worshipped, away from the noisy acclaim. Was it sheer form? Was his heart flowing over? Did he bow down his head in gratitude to Him Who swayeth the hearts? At Nahor stood another one in like mood, perhaps with less cause for jubilation and far away from the highway of society and the momentous affairs of events of life, but fully conscious of benefits received and the sincerity of his thanks in true proportion to the sincerity of his plea for success. Our pleas are usually louder and longer than our acknowledgments and thanks. It's difficult to understand why many, in important matters, rather trust in chuck-luck, blind chance, fickle hunches and instincts than in a wise and merciful God; more difficult it is to understand, where prayers go heavenward, why one should get drunk with success and rest on his laurels and the still small voice of gratitude to God does not stir a leaf. My soul does magnify the Lord, says gratitude; the ingrate tries to magnify his poor little self.

Wesley Reitzer is among the invalids and nursing an injury that may keep him out of commission for a while, and all this due to a contrary beast of burden. We trust to see him again in the rank and file of his working crew before long.

The weather is still quite abnormal all over the country, heavy rains and threatening floods after heavy snow flurries with freezing temperature reaching far south. Bad weather, some even apply hard and harsh terms to the situation. No, we have no reason at all to lose our temper over it and go around pouting with the Lord, though a few inconveniences may arise, forcing a change of schedules and daily chores. So we took it with calmness when last Sunday brought out only a thin crowd to the service and the evening program. Undoubtedly we went ahead and the evening featured as well as ever, crowd or no crowd, and we are glad of it. And please look over the assignments for next time: Recitations, the Misses Crystal Boehle, Ida Balzen; select readings, Mrs. Ida Mummie, Mrs. Wm. Schuehle; vocal selections, Mrs. Ehme Saathoff, Mrs. Alfred Boehle; instrumental number, Mrs. Frank Boehle. Your service is not in vain. The sick-committee has kindly consented to hold the office another term; Miss Florence Grell volunteered to be the second member. Thanks a lot.

Announcements for January the 24th: Service at New Fountain at 10; annual meeting after the service; Sunday school and Junior Bible class at 9:30; English evening service at 7 P. M. Remember the Lord's day.

QUIHI-NEW FOUNTAIN HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB.

"A 23-inch pit is needed for the construction of an ideal hotbed," said the Medina County Home Demonstration agent, as the hotbed was being made at the home of Mrs. Robert Riff, the Quihi-New Fountain Home Demonstration Club pantry demonstrator, on January 14.

This pit was filled with manure within 4 or 5 inches of the surrounding ground level and was trampled down well. It was then filled with soil composed of equal parts of rotted manure and loam soil.

The sash or cover should then be put on the frame and the temperature allowed to rise to over 100 degrees F. during the next few days. No seed should be sown in the hotbed until temperature drops to about 90 degrees F. Keep a thermometer in the hotbed at all times.

The next meeting of this club will be January 28, 1937, at the home of Mrs. Arnold Balzen.

THE LEGISLATIVE MILL.

By Clayton Rand.

Congress and numerous legislatures are grinding out new laws to save the country. We've just about run out of schemes to get rich without working and with prosperity at last having negotiated that difficult corner our law-makers may be short on new ideas.

Had your scribe any influence he would get a law enacted to make the necks of ketchup bottles larger, also the tops of cocktail glasses. Little glasses in which tomato juice is served are pretty tough on men with normal noses.

Also maybe something ought to be done about doing away with these curtain cords that are always getting caught in the ends of shades.

And if we can't make two chickens in every pot compulsory what's the matter with passing a law about making all bathroom fixtures double? There's a lot yet to be done for the country. (Copyright)

SUPREME COURT PROTECTS MINORITIES.

Proposals to limit or abrogate the powers of review of the Supreme Court of the United States have been made often in late years—and, for the most part, have come from representatives of radical organizations.

This is an ironical situation when the Supreme Court is the foremost protector of the rights and liberties of radicals or conservatives, as well as all others. Case after case could be cited in support of this.

A recent action is in point. A Portland, Oregon, Communist, Dirk DeJonge, was arrested at a Communist-sponsored meeting, convicted and sentenced to a long prison term and a heavy fine under Oregon's war-born criminal syndicalism law. The case was appealed through the state courts, which held the law Constitutional.

Then an appeal was taken to the United States Supreme Court. And on January 4, in a unanimous decision read by Chief Justice Hughes, the Court set aside the sentence and held that the Oregon law, as applied in this case, was repugnant to the due process clause of the Constitution—the clause which protects the rights of free speech and assemblage. It is now believed that this decision will strongly and favorably affect the cases of other radicals convicted under the Oregon act.

Thus the Supreme Court uses its power and prestige to maintain the Constitutional rights of radicals who would destroy it! The Supreme Court has always been a fearless defender of civil rights—freedom of speech, freedom of press, freedom of assembly—and especially the rights of minorities. Being immune to politics and to pressure of any kind, it can and does resist the hysteria of the moment so that the Constitution, in spirit as well as word, may be preserved, and America may remain a free nation.—Industrial News Review.

THE FARMER MUST FEED US ALL.

Political fortunes are made or broken according to the whims of popular fancy for the moment.

Elections such as ours on November 3rd may even settle some political issues or, on the contrary, it may create new ones.

Of a certainty, there always remain issues to provoke a difference of opinion where there are minds capable of functioning in thought and forming judgments.

Parties are, therefore, creatures of the time and occasion; and he is indeed shallow minded who thinks

FIRES AND THE RANGE.

By Observer.

This fall and winter will see hundreds of thousands of acres of timber and cut-over timber land burned over, to the detriment of the cattle raiser and to the present and future welfare of timber users. Of these timber fires, over ten per cent will have been wilfully set out by people with the mistaken idea that burning over timber lands is the "cure all" for all range problems, boll weevils, cattle ticks, mosquitoes, sickness and what not. The other ninety per cent will be the result of carelessness or perhaps a very few will be caused by lightning.

In the past thirty years, many thousands of acres of timber lands in Texas have been burned over and returned. If, as many people believe, burning over timberland was promoting the interest of the cattle grower and the farmer, East Texas should today be the most prosperous place on earth. Instead it has been proven conclusively that woods burning is one of the most costly, devastating mistakes of this generation that our children will have to suffer for in the future through the lack of timber resources, impoverished ranges, and dwindling game and fish supply.

Texas farmers and stockmen fully realize the importance of a good fall and winter range for the economical production of beef and dairy cattle.

There was a time in the past when East Texas was especially fortunate in having large areas covered in switch cane which provided an abundance of succulent winter feed in the wastelands along the river and creek bottoms. Today the area formerly covered by this valuable feed has, due to repeated fires, dwindled to where its value is negligible compared to its past importance as a winter pasture.

The wild forage plants and grasses having the greatest nutritive value and producing the best range feed are usually annuals or perennials with a shallow root system. Some of these are plants that spread by creepers that grow on top of the soil and take root. Others produce seed for next year's crop while some propagate by both methods. It is very easy to see how even a very light fire will destroy the most valuable forage plants by destroying the seed and tender creepers. Today the most valuable forest grasses and plants have almost been destroyed in some sections of Texas, especially East Texas. These include bermuda, rescue and carpet grasses, and lespedeza and burr clovers.

Fall and winter fires destroy the seeds for next year's crop and by scorching and burning the tender root creepers, kill out those plants and grasses which reproduce by that method. Fires in the fall and winter also destroy the dry forage ready for winter feed thus necessitating earlier winter yard feeding. During severe winter months, stock on burned over land often suffer severely and the loss may be heavy if the stock is dependent upon the scanty growth left after a fire.

Fall and winter fires destroy the green grass that has continued to grow to some extent under the protective mat of grass and leaves. Many cattle can winter on the dead grass or "rough" mixed with the small amount of green grass found under the mat but after a forest fire this is all destroyed. This necessitates early winter feeding. In the spring following a forest fire, the grass rises late due to the fact that the covering which protects the tender young grass shoots from the late frosts, is gone. This requires longer yard feeding to offset the insufficient supply of forage in the forests. Thus a destructive forest fire shortens the grazing period and lengthens the period when the cattle must be yard and stall fed.

Following a severe forest fire, only those grasses which have a strong deep root system are left on the ground. These are usually grasses which have a stool to protect the roots of the plants and consists mostly of sedge and wire grasses. Sedge and wire grass furnish good grazing in the early spring and summer but in June and July it matures and seeds. From then on it is tough, woody and unpalatable and of little value as a forage grass. Because of their ability to withstand forest fires, they are steadily replacing the better forage plants that are unable to withstand the repeated burning of the forests.

It is not surprising that today our forest ranges are poorer than in the early days of stock raising and unless destructive forest fires are curbed, the day will soon be here when the forests cannot be depended upon at all as a source of income through grazing profits for the stock raiser and the farmer.

BETTER FARM ANIMALS—OR JUST MORE PUREBREDS?

Livestock breeding in the United States may be—genetically speaking—at the crossroads. It may continue simply to increase the number of purebreds, or it may turn sharply toward improving the breeds themselves. A survey by the Department of Agriculture shows animal breeding has not kept pace with plant breeding in developing, cataloging, and perpetuating superior germ plasm.

The reasons are apparent. An animal is a more complex organism than a plant. With larger animals reproduction is much less rapid than with plants. The geneticist works with much smaller numbers. Effects of environment are difficult to separate from effects of inheritance. And self-fertilization, which simplifies breeding of improved plants, is out of the picture with animals. The difficulties are real, but, many scientists believe, not insurmountable.

There already are practical "yardsticks" for measuring production, such as milk records for dairy cows, speed records for horses, and egg records for hens. Methods of determining quality and quantity of production in meat animals are less definite and need improvement.

Pilar straightened. "I see," she said, and then, "The day I came, Tubby dragged me away and threatened me with murder if I called Bryn by anything but Graham. The man you were to marry is named Graham?"

"Yes."

"Your grandmother thinks Bryn is the man?"

"Yes."

"And what happens next?"

There was a queer note in her voice, and Deborah looked up quickly. But Pilar's face had not changed, and Deborah's eyes fell again. "Nothing," she said. "We have to go on until the end of the year, or I do not get the money. The marriage must last for a year. And it must go on for Grandmother's sake, anyway, for that long. After that . . . I don't know what we shall do to explain to Grandmother, but there will be something. Bryn will be free, then, of course."

"You cannot get the money within a year?"

"If the marriage is not successful to that extent," Deborah explained carefully, "I do not get it at all."

"Your grandmother seems very fond of Bryn."

"She loves him," Deborah said, with a little catch in her breath. "He is wonderful to her. Even if the estate were not so tied, I don't see how we could be . . . divorced . . . before that time without breaking Grandmother's heart."

Pilar turned the ivory holder between her long browned fingers. "It seems rather a long time out of Bryn's life," she said. "A year."

"I know."

"I should think there might have been somebody else, Deborah. Somebody you might have paid for his name and his last year."

Deborah looked up again, but did not speak. Pilar was watching her. After a moment she said, "Of course, it's all very romantic, and you are really quite pretty. Any man would like to be the prince who awakens the sleeping beauty."

Deborah's eyes flew to the long oval of Pilar's face. Her own cheeks crimsoned furiously, and her eyes flashed.

"I don't know quite what you are suggesting," she said icily, "but I think you are being insulting."

"Not at all," Pilar replied. "I am merely trying to discover Bryn's reason for this quixotic gesture. It certainly cannot be that he is willing to spend a year with you for your platonic companionship, Deborah. Obviously, you are not suited to be a companion to him. You have not the sophistication, the knowledge of his world. You scarcely speak his language. You say he does not love you; I think that would be impossible, too. There must be companionship in real love, an equality. But I think I do begin to see his reason. There you were, beauty in distress . . . and Bryn was always fond of a new adventure. Something new, something nobody has ever done before. Yes, it becomes quite clear to me. And he would get considerable enjoyment out of this play-acting to your grandmother, this pretense of being simple and bucolic, this pretense of loving you. It is rather an interesting situation, as I must admit."

Deborah was staring at her. "I don't think I care to discuss it any further," she said quietly, "if you don't mind, Pilar."

"There isn't much more to say, is there? Except that I suppose I ought to thank you for explaining it to me, Deborah. I have been . . . troubled. You can understand."

Deborah folded her linen. "Yes," she said.

"Bryn is very difficult," Pilar sighed. "I think this has been the worst fright he has given me. But once, two years ago, I was nearly mad, too. He was in Tibet, and I didn't hear from him for nearly six months. It was reported that he was dead. Of course, he wasn't, nor lost either. He was just living in a native tribe, living like a native, to get the atmosphere, he said. He's wildly interested in people, different kinds of people, the farther from his own kind, the better. But he always comes back in the end, I have discovered that. And when he came back from Tibet," she said with a smile, "he brought me my ring. This ruby. Isn't it a beauty?"

The ruby flashed and glowed on her finger as she held it out for Deborah to see. "It is very lovely," Deborah said gently.

Gary tapped on the door-casing. "Miss Deborah, please," he said. "Mr. Bryn would like a dry pair of shoes. Might I go through and get them?"

"Certainly, Gary."

With a little half bow to Pilar he sidled past her and opened the door on the left. He pushed it back and left it open as he went in, and Pilar, glancing through, saw the narrow white bed against the other wall. She turned deliberately and looked at Deborah's closed bedroom door, and then, with a deep breath, she looked at Deborah and smiled.

"It's all very romantic, isn't it?" she said, and went swiftly across to the hall door. "Thank you for telling me, Deborah. It makes rather a difference."

Bryn had been over in the stable talking to Joe, who came to milk every evening as punctually as sunset.

As he approached the bridge his eyes caught the flutter of a skirt, and his heart turned a complete double somersault. If he had been in any need of proof as to his emotional condition, he had it then. But the skirt did not belong to Deborah; it was much too sophisticated a skirt for that, as he saw at second glance, and his heart settled down sadly into a recumbent position again, and he went forward without interest to meet Pilar.

She was standing in the middle of the bridge, leaning over the railing to look into the water. Bryn stopped beside her, put his elbows on the railing, and gazed down into the brook, too, without a word. Pilar turned, after a moment, and smiled at him; the flashing brilliant smile that was peculiarly her own, that no one else could duplicate. "You know," she said, "I don't blame you for burying yourself away up here, Bryn. It's so far back in Nature that I don't suppose you've ever had quite the same experience before, have you?"

Bryn glanced down at her. Her black eyes, liquid and melting, met his. Her lips were very red.

"No," he replied. "Never."

There was a little silence. They stood together, elbows touching. After a moment Pilar said softly, "Deborah told me her story today."

"Deborah?" he repeated.

"She seemed to think I ought to be told, Bryn."

"Oh."

The black eyes opened wide again. "Had you . . . talked to her about me?"

"Never," Bryn said promptly.

"Oh," Pilar murmured. "I had an idea you had, perhaps. She certainly knew that we had been friends for a long time. Of course, that may be obvious. Whatever she knew, she wanted me to understand just what the situation was between you. Dear quaint little thing! She is such a child, isn't she?"

"Is she?"

"So naive. I was quite touched."

"What did she say the . . . situation was between us, then?"

"Why, simply that this wasn't, as all of us thought, a love match after all. That it was simply a marriage of convenience. I don't quite know why you, of all people, Bryn, had to tangle yourself in it. You may have difficulty in getting free again."

"So she told you we weren't in love with each other?"

"Yes, quite without restraint. It seems rather queer that a girl could be so absolutely cool and businesslike about her marriage, even if it were this kind of marriage. But of course it is not in the least romantic to her, and does not affect her emotions at all, so why should she be anything but businesslike? Do you really mean to stay here for a whole year?" she asked with a sigh. "Is it really necessary?"

"Yes."

"Grandmother's no fool. She's a good deal sharper than you think, Bryn."

"What do you mean?"

"I don't think you're fooling her for a minute. She knows you and the girl aren't living together as man and wife. She must know it. Anybody can see it with half an eye."

"Can they? How?"

"By that child's face, of course."

"I see," Bryn said quietly.

Pilar put her hand on his arm. "Tell her," she begged. "Go and have a talk with the old lady Bryn, and tell her the truth."

"Why?"

"I do think it is too much for them to ask you to sacrifice your life for a whole year to an old lady's whim. She wouldn't die, Bryn. I tell you she is a lot stronger than you think she is, and a lot sharper."

Bryn laughed. To Pilar it was not exactly a pleasant laugh, and she winced a little as she heard it. "I'm not sacrificing my life," he said.

"What do you mean?" she asked, sharply.

"Leaving here would be sacrificing my life, Pilar. Don't you understand? I care more for Grandmother's left eyebrow than I do for everybody I ever knew before, and as for Deborah . . ."

"As for Deborah?"

"Well," Bryn said at last, "upon racking my brains, I can't think of anything in the world that you could put in the scales to balance Deborah that would push them down a feather's weight."

"Are you trying to tell me that you're in love with her?"

"That is my general idea."

Pilar was cold, motionless, her hands clenched around the railing. After a long time she said, "Have you told her so?"

"She doesn't give me a chance."

She came a step closer. "Listen Bryn," she said, under her breath. "Listen . . . you're bewitched. You're mad. You can't marry Deborah. You can't do it."

"I can," Bryn said happily. "I have."

She made a despairing gesture. "I mean . . . a real marriage. Why, she'd drive you crazy, Bryn! She'd drive you mad. What does she know about life, or the world, or any kind of culture? She has no sophistication, she has no polish. She's nothing but an ignorant child, pretty, I grant you, but as insipid as . . . as brook water. In two years—in five years, what are you going to have for a wife? There's nothing there, Bryn. Don't be carried away by a pretty face. You need intelligence, you need companionship, you need a wife who is your equal, who understands your position in the world and can help you carry it off."

FORAGE CROPS FOR HOGS.

By V. M. Couch.

There has been important changes made in the methods of growing hogs during the past ten or twelve years. The old plan of growing pigs without the use of forage crops has been changed to a more efficient and modern method of producing pork. The latter method is equally successful with hogs of all ages. These new methods were brought about largely through a better understanding of the body needs of the hog and as the result of the experimental work done in swine feeding and management.

The greatest advantage in forage crops for pork production lies in the fact that it requires less grain to produce a given amount of weight when forage crops are used, as compared to all-grain feeding. There is less danger from disease, as the pigs are more resistant because of their being in a more thrifty condition, which results in higher daily gains.

The kind of forage crop to grow depends upon the time of the year and the location or section of the country. Crops that are most popular can, as a rule, be grown in any of the hog-growing sections of the country. It is best to produce crops that are seasonal and plan them in such order that the maximum length of pasture season can be had.

Leguminous crops are the most desirable and profitable to use whenever they will fit in a rotation or can be had as a permanent pasture. It may be best in some cases to depend entirely upon either permanent or annual crops or a combination of the two. The objection to depending upon permanent crops is the danger of a shortage at some time during the growing season. If annual crops are used it is essential to set aside a certain piece of ground which may be arranged so as to allow for a rotation or successive pasturing during the summer.

A common rotation is one made up of rye for an early spring crop. While the value of rye for forage does not rank high, it is a crop that will supply the first green feed in the spring. Rye is a rapid grower and should be followed by one that can be put in early. A good combination is field peas, rape and oats for early spring sowing.

SANCTUARY.

A path lured me into the hills today

Where beauty reigned, and all was blithe and gay.

It was a wooded nook of spruce and pines

With greening boughs and wild cucumber vines.

There was the laughter of a little stream

Where one could sit all day and read or dream.

The richest perfumes scent the earth and air.

And elfin spirits, mad with glee, dwell there.

The drowsy dream-like murmuring of bees

Is heard from languid branches of the trees.

In this, quiet nook, my heart with reverence fills,

And hope springs from the beauty of the hills.

THE FARM DINNER BELL.

Oh sing not to me of the chimes in the steeples,
And the melodies rich swelling forth from their throats;
Or the glorious visions that wedding-bells waken
As the air brighter glows with the charm of their notes.

I sing not the bells swaying high in their towers,
Booming forth their grand tones high aloft in the air;
I sing of the bells with a far humbler station,
Content the hard lot of the laborer to share.

And what are the joys which the church bells awaken,
To the rapture which thrills every farmer's bold breast
When the dinner-bell tells that a feast now awaits him,
And with it, that balm to the weary—a rest?

O dinner-bell, flinging thy harsh notes about thee,
Thy sharp, jangling discord sounds sweet to my ear,
As it bids me now take from my labors a respite,
And taste the full joys of a farm-table's cheer.

So, others may sing of the bells of the city,
Or school-bells that echo o'er mountain and lea;
But not all their chiming hath power to charm me,
O dinner-bell, ever I'll rally to thee!

SOD STRIPS EXCELLENT FOR TERRACE OUTLETS.

Strips of meadow—20 to 60 feet in width—are proving highly satisfactory as channel outlets for terraces in natural draws or depressions, according to reports from farmers to the Soil Conservation Service. They may be sodded with adapted legumes or grasses that often produce worthwhile crops. Hay was cut on one such meadow outlet near Spartanburg, S. C., last year at the rate of nearly 2 tons per acre.

These well-sodded outlets allow water to flow from behind terraces without the formation of gullies, they are inexpensive—the cost is about one-third that of masonry structures—and are easily crossed with machinery.

Among the difficulties which may be encountered, however, in using sod for terrace outlets are: Natural depressions are not always present, the channel should not be used until the sod is well established, such strips are not likely to be successful on slopes greater than 8 or 9 percent, and a good topsoil—necessary for the best sod—sometimes is not found where terrace outlets must be made.

Truce Is Called in the General Motors Strike—President's Reorganization Program Criticized—Kidnaped Tacoma Boy Is Found Murdered.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD © Western Newspaper Union.

THROUGH the efforts of Governor Murphy of Michigan a truce in the General Motors strike was arranged, and the prospects for peaceful settlement of the trouble were bright. The governor persuaded Executive Vice President William S. Knudsen of the corporation and President Homer Martin of the United Automobile Workers union to meet in his office in Lansing. The conference lasted more than 15 hours and at its conclusion the truce was announced.

The essence of the agreement was that the union would at once withdraw the sit-down strikers from the General Motors plants in Flint, Detroit and Anderson, Ind., and that the corporation would not remove from the plant any machinery or dies and would not attempt to resume production in those plants for at least 15 days from the date of commencement of negotiations. The joint conferences for a final settlement of the points at issue were to begin in Detroit January 18.

Mr. Knudsen said "Negotiations will be conducted frankly and every effort will be made to bring about a speedy settlement."

Mr. Martin asserted "The union will in good faith endeavor to arrive at a speedy settlement."

Governor Murphy announced that National Guardsmen now in Flint, following an outbreak of rioting at a General Motors plant there, would remain temporarily "but I don't consider this necessary."

The agreement on the armistice came as good news to thousands of idle automobile workers, and other thousands threatened with temporary loss of jobs. At least 115,000 men are now idle, and that many more faced the same situation.

SOME 400 representatives of the five railroad brotherhoods gathered in Chicago to discuss plans for obtaining increases of wages. A committee recommended that formal demands for higher pay be made, but said it had not yet decided on the procedure or the amount of increase to be asked.

J. A. Phillips, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, said that while the committee had agreed that a wage increase should be sought, there had been no consideration of hours of work, pensions or any other matter.

The other four unions represented at the meeting were the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Railroad Trainmen, Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, and the Switchmen's Union of North America. The five groups, which represent the train service classifications of railway employees, are acting independently of the other 16 standard railroad brotherhoods.

PLANS for reorganizing the administrative branch of the government were laid before congress by President Roosevelt, and many Democrats as well as the few Republican members were quick to express their disapproval of parts of the scheme. It would greatly enhance the power of the executive, would abolish no federal agencies and would not result in any considerable economy of expenditures.

Special committees of both houses were to begin drafting a bill to carry out the President's desires, but it was freely predicted that not all of them would get through.

Louis Brownlow, Prof. Luther Gulick and Prof. Charles Merriam constituted the committee that evolved the reorganization plan for the President. The major changes they recommended are:

Creation of two new departments headed by cabinet members—a department of social welfare and a department of public works—and delegation to the President of authority to "overhaul the 100 independent agencies, administrations, authorities, boards, and commissions and place them by executive order" in the ten existing and two proposed additional departments.

Expansion of the White House staff, chiefly by the creation of six "assistants to the President," who would relieve him of much of the routine executive work.

Abolition of the office of controller general with his power to disallow administrative expenditures in advance as violative of law, and creation instead of an auditor general with power limited to reporting annually to congress illegal and wasteful expenditures by the executive branch.

Extension of the merit system to "cover practically all non-policy determining posts," replacement of the civil service commission by a civil service administrator with a "citizen board to serve as the watch dog of the merit system," and increase of salaries to key positions to attract superior ability to a career service.

Development of the "managerial agencies of the government," particularly the budget bureau and agencies engaged in efficiency research, personnel questions, and long range planning of the use of land, water, and other natural resources.

Opposition to the first, third and fourth of these sections was pronounced and it seems certain that introduction of the bill will start a long and stubborn fight in congress.

TEN-year-old Charles Mattson, kidnaped from his home in Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 27 and held for ransom, was found beaten to death in snow covered woods near Everett. The body was nude and cruelly battered. State and city police and department of justice agents, who had been held back to give the lad's father a chance to pay the ransom and save his son, immediately began an intensive manhunt.

One suspect was arrested in San Francisco and others were being traced. A car in which it was believed the lad's body was carried was found.

President Roosevelt expressed the horror of the nation over this brutal crime and authorized a reward of $10,000 for the capture of the kidnaper and murderer. Bernar McFadden added $5,000 to this amount.

THE latest general European war scare has subsided. It was caused by France's announced determination to stop, by force if necessary, the alleged infiltration of German troops into Spanish Morocco, and Great Britain was ready to support the French with its fleet. But Hitler and his ambassador to France were able to convince the nations that the stories were false and that Germany has no intention of trying to grab any Spanish territory. Paris cooled down at once, and to add to the peace atmosphere, negotiations were started for a trade treaty between France and Germany.

Then, too, Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, resplendent first minister of the German reich, went on an official visit to Rome and was informed by Mussolini that the recently signed Italo-British Mediterranean agreement does not change Italy's friendship for Germany or its collaboration with the reich on the major problems of Europe. Goering and Mussolini were supposed to get together on the future course of their governments concerning the Spanish civil war.

LOSING the radio beam in foggy weather, Pilot W. W. Lewis panicked his Western Air Express plane with a crash on a hill near Burbank, Calif., and two of his passengers were killed. Everyone else on the plane, eleven in number, was injured. The dead are Martin Johnson, famous explorer, and James A. Braden of Cleveland. Mrs. Osa Johnson, who accompanied her husband on his adventurous expeditions in Africa and Borneo, was among those most seriously hurt.

There will be searching inquiries into this and other recent air disasters. Senator Copeland of New York blames the Department of Commerce. Airline operators have long complained that certain radio beam stations in the Far West are inadequate. Officials of the bureau of air navigation deny this, asserting: "Radio beams sometimes play queer pranks in certain areas and in certain mountainous territories. Every pilot knows these peculiarities."

Down in Mexico there were three airplane crashes within a week, and it was believed eleven persons had lost their lives.

IT IS pleasant to turn from politics, strikes and war and record the fact that Charles Hayden, New York banker who died recently, left about $45,000,000 to establish a foundation for the education of needy boys and young men, "especially in the advancement of their moral, mental and physical well being." Mr. Hayden, who was a bachelor, also gave $1,000,000 to Massachusetts Institute of Technology, $2,000,000 in trust to his brother and nearly $2,000,000 to friends and employees.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—If the first legislative act of the new congress is to measure its efficiency and its value as the policy making branch of our government, there is no other conclusion than that our legislative body has sunk to a new low in its history. Of course, congress should not be judged by the mess it made in rushing through a resolution barring further shipment of airplanes and engines to Spain but on every side I hear criticism of the lack of common sense used in that instance.

To recall some of the details, when congress convened there was a wild and surging wave demanding that the United States remain neutral and avoid entanglement in the Spanish crisis. Everywhere and on a million tongues was heard the cry that the United States should take no chances; it should take all of the stitches in time that are necessary to make certain that we will not get involved in a circumstance on European soil that threatens to become another 1914.

It has been and is quite evident that the people of the United States are committed to a policy of peace, a policy of neutrality. European developments have proceeded so slowly that even the merest tyro has foreseen the ultimate clash between communism and fascism about which I wrote in these columns some weeks ago. In other words, the European situation has developed after a manner that would enable preventative plans to be laid on this side of the Atlantic ocean.

But congress, in attempting to insure our neutrality, did probably the most unneutral thing it could have done. In so doing, I believe the consensus is that both house and senate demonstrated again the inability characterizing congresses of the last few years to appraise a complete picture. It yielded to what it believed to be the public demand giving thought to the future.

Let us analyze briefly what happened. The congress convened, as I have said, with an almost unanimous demand from the country for a definite and workable neutrality policy. It convened with two or three individual business units seeking to deliver shipments of airplanes and engines to the so-called loyalist troops in Spain. The exporters of these war material sensed quick action by congress that would destroy their contracts. Naturally, they put on all speed to get the planes and engines out of this country ahead of an embargo. Congress, like so many boys in a college football match, fell into the spirit of competition, a race.

Well, the answer is that Robert Cuse succeeded in getting his planes and engines on board ship and away from New York and beat the race by twelve hours, a fact which congressional leaders knew when they enacted the resolution of embargo.

So, it appears to be almost inexcusable that men of brains should have rushed a piece of legislation on through its channels containing an entire absence of neutrality in its very language.

The resolution that was to prevent Mr. Cuse and several others from shipping airplanes and engines to Spain not only laid down the embargo which was its purpose but it laid down that embargo specifically against Spain.

Now, to those not versed in international law, it may not be immediately evident how dangerous such a precedent is. International law requires (and it is accepted everywhere among all nations) that there shall be no discrimination among nations unless those nations are declared to be belligerents. Spain has not been so declared. The war in Spain is a civil war insofar as it relates to any other nation officially. Of course, it is a well known fact that troops from communist Russia and nearly-communist France are helping the so-called loyalist government in Spain. It is equally well known that fascist troops from Nazi Germany and fast-liberal Italy are supporting the rebel General Franco in Spain. These facts would seem to make the war in Spain something more than a civil war, which, indeed, it is, but as far as the United States is officially concerned, the war in Spain remains civil strife. And yet our congress in the worst display of low grade intelligence witnessed in a long time, specifically places Spain in the category of a nation at war with another nation and says in a statute that certain commodities may not be shipped to that nation.

To state this problem another way, it would have been exceedingly simple to have made the legislation apply to all nations and thereby to avoid embarrassment.

There was time after the race with Mr. Cuse was lost to have made the correction of a mistake which should never have been made in the first place. But congressional leaders were swept overboard by the big wave and as far as I am concerned have demonstrated again their lack of ability to keep their feet on the ground.

I do not know what it presages in the way of future legislation. It may be that after the excitement has died down, congress will again debate legislation and work out proper laws but the start certainly has been inauspicious.

Attention ought to be called just here to the differences that have arisen and promise to cause difficulties between the executive branch of the government and some of the legislators. Mr. Roosevelt, as President, seems to feel that he should have plenty of power to deal with problems like the Spanish situation and export of arms without consulting congress. A good many New Deal Leaders in congress feel the same way. But there are many who disagree with that idea. There is pronounced sentiment at the Capitol in favor of legislation that would definitely prohibit the exporting of arms and munitions of war but including definitions and guide lines for those in the executive branch of the government to enforce.

It is too early yet to tell what form the permanent legislation will take because of the circumstances just outlined. With the top heavy New Deal majority in congress, it would seem the better guess to predict that Mr. Roosevelt will have his way but on the other hand, until such an issue becomes clear cut one cannot tell very far in advance how the two schools of thought will solve their problem and whether the United States will be committed further to the one man control that would necessarily result from granting additional discretionary power to the President in a matter of this kind.

There seems to be no doubt anywhere that sooner or later one of the nations whose troops is participating in the Spanish civil strife will commit an overt act, an act of war. Some hot-headed individual in command of a ship or an airplane or troops guarding a border will take a pot shot that will wipe out a life or two and wipe out peace at the same time just as occurred when the comparatively insignificant Austrian Archduke was shot in 1914. There can be no question that the United States must follow an international policy under these circumstances that is most cautious.

Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, the famous dreaming brain trust No. 1 of the Roosevelt administration, has returned to private life—to an executive position with a molasses firm. Before he left his post as Undersecretary of Agriculture, however, the famous professor signed an order that is designed to curb lobbying by former employees of the Department in whose administration he had a hand.

The aim of this order was an obviously worthy one because it was designed to prevent former officials or employees of the Department of Agriculture from using new connections with commercial groups from obtaining information or using influence not of the best sort from a public standpoint. With that order, there can be no quarrel.

I find among astute observers in Washington, however, no serious supposition that the order would operate to deprive Dr. Tugwell himself or any other former official of high standing from access to members of the Department's staff. It just does not work out that way. It never has and it never will, despite the wholesome character of the good professor's plans.

The truth is that while such an order may make lesser officials more cautious and thus put a few obstacles in the way of petty lobbying, it is thoroughly ineffectual in preventing the use of influence or the obtaining of information from that Department or any other in the government.

The difficulty with this situation is that government offices are being used as a stepping stone to more lucrative jobs. The government does not offer ambitious and able men a security of tenure. Men who demonstrate ability in governmental positions sooner or later are offered jobs with great big salary checks attached and they would be less than human if they did not consider such proposition when they know that in the course of human events a great turnover will take place in their own department and they are swept aside by reversal of public political action.

THE WAY OF SALVATION.

By Rev. J. T. Horgar.

ARTICLE NO. 14.

Having traced the lives of the disciples of Christ for several articles, we left them in a discussion of the benefits of the Holy Ghost upon them. It is a common idea that for one to be baptized with the Spirit, sanctified and live a holy life, necessarily requires many years of persistent effort to attain such an abnormal life. In the first place, such a life is not the abnormal but the normal Christian life. And it is not an ATTAINMENT, through good works, but it is an OBTAINMENT by faith, which God would have us receive early in life. For justification, regeneration and sanctification are the three cardinal principles which should be obtained EARLY in life; without which it is impossible for one to be at their best in the Christian life and work. Therefore, God has ordained that all three of them be obtained early in the Christian life. Now let's see if I am scriptural in holding that we should be truly sanctified in early life?

Remember, when God sanctifies, it is not consecration, nor dedication; man consecrates or dedicates, but it is GOD who sanctifies by the baptism with the Holy Ghost and fire. There is no other means of sanctification. If one has been baptized with the Holy Ghost, they have been sanctified; and if they have not been baptized with the Holy Ghost they have not been sanctified. Note we hold that God wants us sanctified soon after we are born of the Spirit. So we note that the disciples received the baptism of the Spirit not later than three years after they were justified. Next, we turn to Acts, tenth chapter, and find Cornelius and his household received the gift of the Holy Ghost under one sermon from Peter, not later, we presume, than three to seven years from their conversion. You know that according to Scripture, no one can receive the Holy Ghost till after they are born of the Spirit. We presume that Cornelius was not born of the Spirit before John's baptism, which was about seven years before he received the gift of the Holy Ghost. We note that Cornelius and his household received the Holy Ghost as a "second work of Grace", not later than seven years after they were converted.

Then we turn to Acts 19:1-7, where Paul, leaving Aquila and Priscilla at Ephesus, went to Jerusalem and to Antioch, and throughout Galatia and Phrygia in order, strengthening all the disciples. And while Paul was thus gone for some time, Apollos came to Ephesus and preached fervently, knowing only the baptism of John; as we understand, knowing only regenerating grace. We believe about nine-tenths of our preachers are in the same fix today; they ought to "GO ON TO PERFECTION"—the baptism of the Holy Ghost. But we had started to say that, evidently, Apollos had some twelve converts at Ephesus and then passed on into Achaia; then Paul returning to Ephesus and finding, as we presumed, those converts of Apollos, he asked them, "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?" And they said, we have not heard whether there be any Holy Ghost; that is, as their inheritance, to be sought and received. How many Spirit-born Christians of God in our land today can say the same thing! Oh, they have heard that there is a heretical fanaticism about the seeking and receiving the Holy Ghost as a "second blessing", and they have been cautioned to shun such teachings lest they get entangled with fanaticism.

But Paul was not afraid of the "second blessing"; and after instructing them, they believed in the gift of the Spirit and were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus; and when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came upon them and they "spoke with tongues and prophesied". Now notice, these disciples received the gift of the Holy Ghost only a few weeks or months after they were converted; so we see that God would have us receive the gift of the Holy Ghost soon after we are born of the Spirit. And we also note that this was over twenty years after the disciples of Christ received their Pentecost; and believers were still receiving the "second blessing", just the same as the first disciples did at Pentecost.

Then we turn to Acts 8:5-25, and find Philip preaching to the Samaritans. Read and note that they were genuinely converted and yet, when the Apostles at Jerusalem heard of it, they sent Peter and John down there that they might receive the Holy Ghost, which was to them the "second work" of grace. And notice: it was only a few weeks at best after they were converted. So we see that this was AFTER the first disciples were sanctified at Pentecost, and also AFTER these Samaritans were converted; and that it occurred NOT LONG AFTER their conversion.

Next we call attention to Acts 9:1-30 where Saul, in the act of persecuting the Church, one or two years after the first disciples were sanctified at Pentecost, started to Damascus to arrest and bring to trial all Christians he might find there, was stricken to the ground by the Lord and there converted and sent to Ananias, and Saul might receive his sight and the Holy Ghost; which he received under the ministry of Ananias just THREE days after his conversion, which made it truly a "second work of Grace". So we learn by the Scriptures cited in this article that the house of Cornelius and the disciples of Ephesus, and the converts under Philip at Samaria, and also Saul, who afterward was called St. Paul, were all baptized with the Holy Ghost AFTER the Holy Ghost descended on the 120 disciples at Pentecost; and that all of them, like the Scriptures require, had been duly converted, justified, regenerated, and thus born of the Spirit BEFORE they received the Holy Ghost; and that they also received the Holy Spirit SOON AFTER they were converted, ranging from three days, on the part of St. Paul, and all the others above mentioned, received the Holy Ghost some years after the first

Pentecost, and also some time AFTER they all had been truly converted.

So they were all "second blessing" Holiness people even if some folks do brand them as heretics and fanatics. Now these articles are costing me some study, labor and money, all of which I am none able to meet at the present, but I would freely give ten times more if I could only show our pastors and their members the cause and terror of nine-tenths of all their spiritual deadness and dullness and LACK of spiritual zest and zeal, holy courage and Divine Power. Also the spiritual understanding and holy wisdom necessary to carry on God's work in a successful way, is all couched in the gift of the Holy Ghost, sought and obtained as a "second blessing" preparatory to the best service.

AUNT MOLLIE.

Aunt Mollie told the nicest thing 'S if it wasn't much to do. Mother and me thought it was great, And I'm sure you will, too.

She sorted out some wartime things, Nice, warm yarn with the rest, Some of it khaki colored, The kind us boys like best, Then she knit pairs of mittens, A dozen, more or less, What she did with them mittens I'll bet you'd never guess.

Each morning she'd give cousin Jim A pair—some cold days more— To put in his coat pocket When he went to his store.

Then he would watch for newboys— There was lots of them there— And when he saw one with bare hands He'd just give him a pair. Jim said you'd ought to see them boys, Their faces was a scream, Surprised and glad and puzzled 'S if they thought it was a dream.

She told it like 'twas something Most anyone would do, I think she's great, and I'd have liked Jim's job, too, wouldn't you? —GAZELLE STEVENS SHARP.

CORRECT MEASUREMENTS AS A BASIS FOR PERFECT FITTING.

"It certainly pays to take correct measurements to get a perfect fit," said Mrs. A. J. Boog, wardrobe demonstrator of D'Hanis Home Demonstration Club, as she was observing Mrs. Dora Barnes, Clothing Specialist from A. and M. College, check a foundation skirt pattern. These patterns were being cut by Wardrobe Demonstrators from each club in Medina County under Mrs. Barnes' supervision, after which each demonstrator will supervise the members of her individual club in doing the same work.

At a meeting in February the County Home Demonstration Agent, Miss Irene Hawkins, will check each garment.

The club members are very glad to be the possessors of a well-fitted foundation garment, from which she may cut any style dress, slip or pajama.

"From the standpoint of harvesting, housing and value of the feed, a trench silo is the most economical way to save a feed crop," says W. W. Steward, Sr., of Freestone county. Steward stored 88 tons of silage from a six-acre crop of red sorghum. The total cost of this feed including breaking of the land, cost of the seed, planting, plowing and harvesting, digging and filling the silos amounted to only $1.30 per ton. This included a charge of $1 per day per head for his mules. All labor was hired.

By planting his field with two rows of corn and one row of cow peas, Mack Rosenau of Waller county has stepped up his corn production by 10 years. Rosenau uses no fertilizer, depending entirely on the added fertility given the land by planting cow peas on every third row. Under his rotation system, cow peas are planted on each row every three years. The turkey herd on the Rosenau farm eat the cow peas and the vines are left on the land to be plowed under.

SUMMARY OF HOME DEMON- STRATION WORK IN MEDINA COUNTY FOR 1936.

By Miss Irene Hawkins.

Since Home Demonstration work is being given in Medina County for the first time, the schedule of work involved is purpose and organization of clubs in Home Demonstration and 4-H Club work.

Six Girls 4-H Clubs have been organized and have selected gardens and interior home improvement for their first Demonstration. There are 113 girls enrolled in these clubs up to December 31st, 1936. The eight Women's Home Demonstration Clubs which have been organized, have chosen the 4-H Pantry Home Food Supply and Wardrobe for their first demonstration work. These suggestions were made by the clubs pursuant to suggestions of the Specialists from the Extension Service. The eight women's clubs consist of 133 members.

The goals accomplished up to December 31, 1936, are as follows:
Bedroom Demonstration: 113 girls have removed unnecessary and unattractive articles from their bedrooms.

Garden Demonstration: 113 girls have made planting plans to be used in planting the leafy, green and yellow vegetable section of their gardens.

Wardrobe Demonstration: 1, 133 women have begun expense accounts and wardrobe planning. 2. Eight demonstrators have been given directions for making foundation patterns
by Mrs. Dora K. Barnes, Clothing Specialist from A. and M. College.

Pantry Demonstration: 133 women have made planting plan and canning budget. This plan will be followed in planting the leafy, green and yellow section of the garden, for Cooperators, and all sections of the garden by the Demonstrators.

The Medina County Home Demonstration Council was organized December 5, 1936, with six out of the eight clubs having presidents and elected delegates present. A committee was appointed to make the standing Home Demonstration Council rules to be adopted at the first Council Meeting in the 1937 Council year. Officers-elect of this Council are:

Chairman—Mrs. Joe Zerr.
Vice-chairman—Mrs. F. C. Stinson.
Secretary-Treasurer—Mrs. Riley
Sittre.

MAKING THE BEST BETTER IN CLOSETS.

"Closets that are not built to the ceiling are catch-alls," said Mrs. A.
J. Boog, D'Hanis Wardrobe Demonstrator. "But since we plan to rebuild the front part of our house, I would like to have a portable closet," she continued. However, Mrs. Boog in building her portable closet has decided to slant the top in order to avoid the "Catch-all" characteristics.
The closet she plans will be 6 ft.
long, 10 ft. high and 32 inches deep;
with shelves 12 inches apart and 18 inches deep, placed in each end of the closet. This is to be built of very light weight material, such as wall board, on a sufficient frame, supported by casters placed as far apart as is necessary to support the framework.

REDBIRDS DEFEAT WOODLAWN; TO PLAY TONIGHT.

an extra five minute period to break a tie the Hondo Redbirds defeated the Woodlawn Methodists by a score of 30-24 last Friday at the Fair

Thursday night the Redbirds jour-sults were not available. The Redbirds hope to bring teams representing Seguin Lutheran College, Schreiner Institute, University of San An-

Hondo in the near future.

Tonight the Redbirds meet the highly touted Monier Plumbers from San Antonio at the local gym. The Plumbers have two local boys on their team: Roy Schweers and Aug-athletes in Hondo High School.

New charters granted to corporations during August were slightly greater in number than those of the preceding month last year, the capitalization of these firms sharply above both comparable periods, the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research has reported. The records of the office of Secretary of State show 132 new charters granted, against 131 in August year and 128 in July. Contributing to the increase in total capitalization was the fact that there were firms with capital of more than $100,000 in August compared with only three in July and two in August last year. The Bureau pointed out Groups showing an increase in number of new charters granted manufacturing, merchandising, public service.

Dollar sales of Texas department stores during August showed substantial gains over the corresponding month last year and a moderate increase over the preceding month, the University of Texas Bureau of Research announced. Reports from 87 representative Texas establishments indicate an increase in sales of 16.8 per cent over August of last year and 7.6 per cent over July of current year. Sales for the year date were 16.1 per cent greater than for the like period last year. Official gains in sales above the 1936 average in comparison both for August a year ago and the first months of the year included Abilene, Corsicana, Dallas, Lubbock and San Antonio.

That 1937 may be a prosperous year for all its friends is the sincere wish of FARMING.

To a hard-headed son of American freedom, it is hard to understand the English people's toleration of a king, much less their going into hysterics over his choice of female associates.

Start the New Year right by getting right on Farming's subscription list. The figures after your name on the address of your paper shows how your date stands. If your paper stops coming it means you have allowed it to slip into arrears to where you come under the postoffice ban. Don't miss an issue.

Now is the time for planning the crop scheme for your 1937 farming operations. The first purpose in planning crop production is to make the farm as nearly self-sustaining as possible. The nearer a self-sustaining basis can be achieved the more velvet there will be to whatever surplus cash crops may be produced.

Much is being said and written now-a-days about the farm tenant problem. In this as in all ills, the only right approach is to remove the cause. Remove the cause and you cure the illness. Doctor the symptoms and leave the cause and you make the patient worse and prolong his agony. Instead of the quack remedies proposed, let the Federal government issue its bills of credit in legal tender scrip to worthy risks, taking a mortgage on the land purchased as a basis of security for the circulation and thus place it within the reach of every man who desires to own and live on a small farm to buy one; let the homestead be exempt from all taxation and so make it possible for the homeowner to retain it; place a graduate land tax on all holdings of land above a modest homestead and a graduated production tax on all large scale farming such as is done by large corporations; and knock down the tariff walls and give the farmer freedom of the markets of the world and the tenant problem will be solved. Leave these undone and they who labor for its solution will labor in vain.

It would be well for us all, says the Industrial News Review, on the threshold of the new year, to look abroad at dictator-ridden Europe. In many great countries the free press has been abolished. Free speech has become a crime. All criticism of those in power has been silenced with imprisonment and death. In some countries the right to worship has been abrogated by law, the state has been made Divine, the dictator in power must be regarded as a god, and the individual has been reduced to an actual state of slavery. While we pity the citizens of those nations, and wonder that such things could have come to pass in this century, we can learn an invaluable lesson from their plight. We still live under a Constitution that guarantees us freedom of religion, freedom of speech and freedom of the press. UPON THE PRESERVATION OF THAT CONSTITUTION AND THE LIBERTIES IT GUARANTEES DEPENDS THE FUTURE OF THE UNITED STATES AND THE AMERICAN PEOPLE. In the pursuit of an economic millenium we must not sacrifice national ideals and principles that are the very lifeblood of democracy.

SHOULD WE FORGET?

One of the saving graces of the American people is their disposition to forget the rancors of a political campaign as soon as the shouting is over.

However salutary this may be, it is well to beware of carrying a good thing too far.

For instance, the late national campaign brought out the fact of an ugly condition that should not be allowed to exist longer than it takes congress to remove it.

We condence herewith from a Washington press dispatch of September 16th past:

After poring over federal statutes, Attorney General Cummings today warned merchants against displaying "politically inspired" placards purporting to show how prices are affected by direct federal taxes.

"Quite a number of protests have been received", Cummings said, "from various parts of the country, including Illinois, Indiana and Iowa. They claim that some merchants have been putting up placards indicating what part of a price is due to federal taxation.

"There also are indications", he said, "that the placards were put out to affect the coming election.

"I sincerely hope that partisan zeal will not lead anyone to violate the federal statutes. It would be embarrassing all around and the justice department certainly does not want to be drawn into anything with partisan significance.

"I hope," he continued, "that this warning will have a salutary effect. Good sense ought to prevail."

Cummings' statement was made at a press conference.

He said that section 1123 of the federal statutes, provides a fine of $1000, one year in jail, or both, for anyone convicted of making statements, in connection with the sale of any article, intended to lead persons to believe that any part of the article's price consisted of a federal tax. False statements also were forbidden.

One reporter recalled that gasoline venders and theatre ticket sellers frequently advertised the amount of federal taxes included in the purchase price of gasoline and tickets.

"It is still a matter for conjecture," Cummings said, "how far this could be applied to things like that done by common consent."

Makers of Federal taxing laws should remember that our forefathers rebelled against the mother country out of resentment at being taxed "without representation."

They can well beware what may be the consequences of the graver oppression of being "TAXED WITHOUT THE PRIVILEGE OF BEING INFORMED".

HOW FARM COOPERATIVES OPERATE.

John Jones is a dairy farmer in a famous dairy state. All the surrounding counties are likewise largely occupied by dairy farmers.

For years John Jones had sold his products for whatever he could get—and his bargaining power was practically non-existent.

Finally, John Jones and a number of other farmers got together. They formed an organization through which the products of all of them would be sold through one central office. They put up their money to get the organization going and to hire a manager.

The result was a vast increase in bargaining power with buyers—and fairer prices.

There, in a few words, is the simple story of how most agricultural selling cooperatives start and operate. There's no mystery about them—they simply represent proven business principles applied to farming. —Industrial News Review.

CONGRESS SHOULD TAKE HEED.

From competent authority these facts which we have nowhere seen disputed are quoted:

"During the four years' tenure of the past two congresses appropriations have totaled a little less than $32,500,000,000. This amounts to 8 billion dollars more than was appropriated by all the congresses sitting from the time of President Washington (1789) to the time of President Wilson (1913). In the interim between Washington and Wilson, the country became involved in several wars (War of 1812, Civil War, Spanish American War, Mexican War) but the sum of $24,000,000,000 was sufficient to keep the Federal government during the 124 years represented. According to the United States News, the cost of all wars fought in that period was less than the cost of a single New Deal measure—the $4,480,000,000 unemployment relief act."

America is a land of marvelous resources and a strangely complacent people, but the 75th Congress would do well to remember, when considering further expenditures of tax money, that there is a limit to both resources and patience.

Over the speaker's desk should be emblazoned in letters of living fire these words that have been so flagrantly flouted for the past four years:

"If the nation is living within its income, its credit is good. If in some crisis, it lives beyond its income for a year or two it can usually borrow temporarily on reasonable terms. But if, like a spendthrift, it throws discretion to the winds, is willing to make no sacrifice at all in spending, extends its taxing to the limit of the people's power to pay and continues to pile up deficits, it is on the road to bankruptcy."—F. D. Roosevelt, October 19, 1932.

A VITAL POINT OMITTED.

We have often admired Clarence Ousley's clear thinking and, when not the mouthpiece of some selfish group, his lucid statement of facts and conclusions.

In a discussion of the administration's tenant-farmer-aid plan, as outlined by A. G. Mayse of Paris, Texas, a member of the President's Committee on the problem, Mr. Ousley says:

"Mayse is in accord with others who have studied the problem in the view that both during the period of probationary tenancy and during the entire period of debt-paying the operator shall be REQUIRED to farm according to programs prescribed by the governmental authority in order to insure soil conservation and to provide against the speculative farming to which so many operators are tempted under pressure of occasional high prices for certain crops. A QUESTION ARISES WHETHER MANY TENANTS WILL BE WILLING TO PURCHASE FARMS UNDER SUCH RESTRAINTS OF PERSONAL LIBERTY."

Mr. Ousley omitted to state the more vital question as to whether the economic gain—be it ever so great—can be worth the price of the liberty so bartered—whether the injury to the farmer's morale and self-respect would not far over-balance in moral values his economic benefits.

Furthermore, what is to be thought of a Democratic government changing to a socialistic form to become an absentee landlord on a scale never dreamed of before?

ANVIL SPARKS

WHO FINDS—

—Satisfaction in a task well done has received his greatest reward!

—Himself never lonely when alone with his own thoughts is his own safe friend!

—Peace in his heart for his fellow man finds peace with his God!

—Consolation in his faith has found his brightest hope!

—The futility of his reasoning has found wisdom!

—Strength to forgive has conquered his own worst enemy!

—Courage to fight on when all seems lost has achieved a victory whatever his losses!

Who on his Reason most depends
Must oft in darkness grope;
Wiser are they who hope—
Both Hope and Reason serve Life's ends!

The leader who must be followed blindly is unworthy of leadership.

Freedom to starve your own way is more to be desired than the bread of a master however generous!

Who would be brave, I'm here to tell,
Must ever be discreet as well!

Good or evil—no matter which you choose—both demand their price.

A WINTER REVERIE.

Blustering down from the Northland's cold and icy plains,
Where old King Boreas in splendor rules and reigns,
Swept his chill Northwinds in a mighty cavalcade
And before their charge the flowers in death were laid!

And like demons in mad caprice let loose to play,
They howled in doleful glee over the sad display
Of ruin that their sharp and icy swords had spread—Leaving of my flowers only the mournful dead.

Vainly among the waste and wreckage they had wrought
Some salvage of life among my treasures I sought, Finding but surcease in Hope of another morn
When their pristine beauty should be again reborn.

So why do I in sadness dirges o'er them sing?
They will be mine again with the return of Spring;
For though their fair forms the icy winds blight and kill,
Life is theirs to bloom again immortal still!

THE MUSES' GARDEN

A FARMER'S THOUGHTS.

Time to till the soil, neighbor,
Time to plant the corn;
Work's sure getting piled up
Tho' I'm up each morn
'Fore the sun is out o' bed,
'Fore it's bright and clear.
But I'm mighty glad, aren't you?
To be alive an' here.

Days were when I fished and "swum",
Slid the haystack high;
Barefoot day was happy one—
Miss it! tho' I try Walkin' in the meadow sweet
When I'm lonesome sad,
Thinking of hay-loft retreat
When I was a lad.

But I guess when years pass by
We should let them go Without sadness, vain regret—
That I've learned to know.
So I'll work my fields in peace,
Sing a song or two,
Whistle 'neath the budding trees
And watch the sun shine thru.

Then, when life is at an end,
I can smile and think
Of the graceful river bend
Where my cattle drink.
I can visualize the day—
Barefoot, joyful, free—
Hours were endless, always gay—
Grief seemed far from me.

So, we'll till the soil, neighbor,
And we won't complain.
Happy days are busy days,
No grumbling at the rain.
So, I'll lend a helping hand,
Now you've work to do
I can find a little time;
Somehow we'll get thru.

—ESTHER EGER HARRINGTON.

GRAINS OF CORN.

Within my cupped hands I hold living
grains of corn,
Hard, unyielding, drab and ugly, to me forlorn.
By common uses they do their part
for man, beast, Furnishing food, comfort for the body, at least.
All these services for progress and advancement
Yield nothing to the soul's peace, joy and contentment.
But living seeds placed within Mother
Earth's embrace,
The husks now unfold and a miracle takes place.

A pulsing beat of the life within the kernel,
There springs up to the sun's light
something eternal;
Sprigs of new green to whisper in the summer wind;
Reproduce their kind, cycle complete without end.

Within my cupped hands I hold hard,
drab grains of corn;
But my heart's faith in immortality reborn.

—ANGIE ANDERSON.

NEW YEAR'S ROSARY.

The New Year comes as a gift that is free
From the hand of The Father Divine;
Each day is a pearl on your Rosary
Which you must count off, as you twine
Its wonderful jewels of sunshine and rain
With the hours of labor and rest;
And the deeds that you do make a welded chain
That must stand The Master's test.
—KAY McCULLOUGH.

THE OLD MAILBOX.

Each day I make a pilgrimage
Down past the hollyhocks,
To where for many years has stood
A battered rusty box.

It seems a long way down the road,
Wish I could climb the fence!
Oh, will there be some word from you?
How thrilling the suspense!

The homeward walk takes twice as long
For we must read the news;
And from the latest catalogue
Perchance a bargain choose.

Though often too it holds the bills,
(Of which there seems no end!)
I can't help feeling our mailbox
Is an old faithful friend.

—GERTRUDE WARTCHOW.

WHEN A PIPE IS LIT.

A man without a pipe is like
A ship without a sail
Because a pipe will lead him through
The roughest kind of gale;
It may go out and be stone cold
But he grips it 'tween his teeth.
Like all get-out and works away
Grubbing behind, beneath
The hardest task that's set for man
To do. It is his brother
Designed to be a steady pal
There isn't any other
That's quite so fitting to his moods
So comforting and dear
A man that is a man has always
His good pipe quite near,
He'll fondle it and press it close
Then scratch a match By Gee!
And all the world is peaceful like
When it is lit, you see.

—THE TUMBLEWEED.

SILHOUETTE.

On yon dusk-shadowed hill
A lone pine stands—
Majestically—
Like a sentinel;
Silhouetted against
The burnished glow
Of sunset's sky.
Alas! my tongue is mute.
—SARAH MIZELLE MORGAN.

POETS, TURN TO MASH.

I wrote a poem; wrote it with care,
I sent it here—I sent it there—
To editors o'er land and sea,
But away it returned to me.

I wrote a check I scarce could read,
Sent to the mill for chicken feed;
And was my poor handwriting spurned?

The answer: Check did NOT return!

Long years ago, beneath an oak,
I lost the poem—blue, and "broke";
But found the check I wrote that day—
For—"Mash", you know, makes chickens lay!

—VERLA G. MAUCK.

OUR PART.

Listen! The bells' decorous chime,
The saddest, sweetest sound and
dear!
The night reluctantly holds time,
The last, last moment of the year.

When day-light comes another year,
Who came to us within the night,
Will stand in door-ways far and near,
To greet a world in early light.

Our part will be to welcome him,
The tender, young, and sweet New Year,
And wrap the mummy old year grim,
And keep him always in the rear.

—MALOY BYRNS.

FAITH.

Who can breathe the fragrance,
sweet
Of dew-wet bud or flower,
And not feel deep within his heart
Some great transcendent power?

Who can watch a full-orbed moon
Slow-climbing into sight,
And feel within himself afraid
With such celestial light?

Who can look on yonder hills
With fluffy clouds piled high,
And not feel sweet enduring peace,
And faith to satisfy?

—IDA RICE HUMPHREYS.

THE OLD AND NEW YEAR MEET.

The gates of time swing open—
And with glad some song and shout
We greet the coming New Year,
As the Old Year passes out!
The New Year comes in laden
With fresh hopes for happiness;
The Old Year goes out bearing
Deeds of failure and success.

The New Year comes in bringing "Opportunities For Right"
Bound together in a volume—
With each page of spotless white;
And, when this year shall have ended,
May we have the right to claim
That, upon its precious pages,
We have placed no marks of shame.

Fond memories are mingled
With the days of the Old Year;
Within its volume many scenes
Of happiness appear;
We cherish them, in reverence,
The while we long to greet
The future, as thru gates of time,
The Old and New Year meet.

THE FALL OF SNOW.

Flakes moulded perfect-crystal tears—
Falling joyfully, heedless fears;

Fairies catch the frozen teardrops
Before they land upon the housetops,
Making garlands as they flurry along
On the wings of the wind with merry song:

Flying like white-winged little birds,
they rest.

Alighting upon the earth hard and brown,

Banking feathery drift of softest down;

Covering the hillside with shroud of white,

Hanging on pine trees, fleecy blankets light.

Laying in the valley or dale—
Fluffy delicate novice veil—;

Until Apollo draws them to his gay breast.

—ETHEL LOUISE HALSTEAD.

ABOVE THE CLANGOR AND THE GRIME.

The train wound through a labyrinth of shops,

Low, dingy, noisy, mean.

The clangor, the monotony, the filth
Enmeshed me like a screen.

I raised my eyes above the grime and din.

Surprised, I saw a row
Of gleaming mountain peaks, silent and calm,

Covered with spotless snow.
—GAZELLE STEVENS SHARP.

OH, DOCTOR!

I know I've got gastritis,
Halitosis and the flu;
Sinus trouble and neuritis
And a bum appendix too.
I should have some tonsil-jerking
For my rheumatism's bad.
It's so hard to think of working
When one feels so very bad.
Acidosis and diabetes,
Psticosis and the itch???

I should get some doctor's treatise
But be blest if I know which.

—SAND DUNE SAGE.

Years are like dreams
That pass with dawn,
How brief Life-span
When youth has gone!

WREATH FOR A PLAIN MAN.

The world is just a little emptier
Without the man; yet what on earth
he did

Is hard to say. Nothing spectacular
At best; nothing that merited Place in the sun, as meted out for this:

A routine day's work somewhere which began

At nine, ending in mild domestic bliss.

Such was the small achievement of the man.

He had a dog, two children, and a wife.

Loved gardening, and liked to feed the birds.

This was the little sum of the man's life;

This, and the gift he had for cheery words

That made the bread of his sincere
"Good-morrow"

As nourishing as crumbs he gave the sparrow.

DEVINE NEWSLETS.

From The Devine News.
COMMITTEE BEGS COURT CON-DEMN RIGHT-OF-WAY.

A special committee from the Devine Chamber of Commerce appeared before the County Commissioner's at Hondo Monday afternoon to urge immediate condemnation proceedings against the few 'holdouts' to complete the right-of-way in the Devine precinct for Highway 173 in order that work may be started on the proposed highway just as soon as the highway commission may provide the necessary funds. The committee, composed of H. D. Tally, W. E. Russell and C. A. Tunnell, called attention to the long delay in procuring the right-of-way and asked that it be not further delayed.

Mr. Talley, as spokesman, explained to the county board that the property taxpayers of the Devine precinct voted bonds for the purpose of providing right-of-way for highway 173, almost two years ago and were entitled to immediate action since effort to procure the right-of-way by private agreement had failed. He expressed the belief that if right-of-way deeds had been turned over to the highway commission within a reasonable time after the bonds were voted, the proposed road would be under construction. He did not ask for condemnation except in the Devine precinct, pointing out that with deeds to that portion of the right-of-way it may be possible to get contract let on a part of the road.

Commissioner Hardcastle of this precinct believes that everything has been done that can be done to reach an agreement with the property owners and is willing for three disinterested men to view the property and fix the damages, thus eliminating further delay in making the right-of-way available for construction of the road. When a jury of view has been appointed and takes up the matter of condemnation, the property becomes available at once and if the owner is not satisfied with the award of damages he has the right to appeal to the county court, but appeal in no wise interferes with title to the land for road purposes.

If the request of the committee and Commissioner Hardcastle is granted, the right-of-way in that part of the precinct north of Devine may be available within the next 30 days.
Then, if it is found that the highway commission has any available funds, there is some hope of getting a contract let for construction of this short stretch of the road. It is pointed out that one thing is certain and that is without the right-of-way a contract for all or even part of the road will never be let. This road is a secondary road is true, but it is important as a "farm-to-market" road and as a connecting link between two great "across-the-state" highways that will shorten the distance between the great wool-growing country of West Texas and the gulf port at Corpus Christi.

RIOTOUS PIRATE PICTURE COMING.

A mischievous little girl with a vivid imagination, a lovable old liar and a crochety spinster get into a sea of trouble that makes for much hilarity in the First National comedy drama, "The Captain's Kid", which comes to the Colonial Theatre on Monday and Tuesday. The picture, largely a swift moving frolic of fun,
also combines melodramatic thrills, romance and touches of pathos. "The Captain's Kid" is enacted by a talented cast with May Robson, famous for a half century on the stage, in the leading role, that of a crabbed old maid who tries in vain to bring up her two nieces, one seven and the other twenty, according to her straight-laced New England standards. But she finds her hands full in the seven year old child star, Sybil Jason, whose imagination makes her yearn to be a pirate. In this she is aided and abetted by a likeable old roustabout in the person of Guy Kib-bee, who much prefers a lie to the truth.

THANKSGIVING DINNER.

A Thanksgiving dinner is twice as fair
If, at the table's no vacant chair.

A Thanksgiving dinner is twice as
sweet
If, love's in the hearts of those who eat.

A Thanksgiving dinner is twice as good
After a prayer of gratitude.

SCATTERED AUTUMN LEAVES.

While yester's multi-colored autumn
leaves.

Obedied the season's call of nature's trees

They sprinkled down from graceful finger tips,

To kiss the tiny seeds on sleeping lips,
And bade good night each silent
loamy bed

Till spring a-waked, and crowned with regal head.

They knew full well, the tiny garnered sheaves

Were blanketed, with Scattered Leaves.

coaxed that wherewithal by which we are fed.

This calls for thorough preparation, careful cultivation and frugal garnering of the fruits of that toil.

And in the abundance of the yield lies the security of our bread.

Scarcity favors the fortunate who have when others are without; but the fortunate who have are too few when there are many who are without.

And what with the whims of nature—with its floods or its droughts, its hails or its hot winds—this year's abundance may be wiped out by next year's dearth.

Scarcity always means higher prices—not always for the producer but never without fail for the consumer.

The greater the scarcity the higher the cost of living to those who must buy.

Students of the market trends at the present time are of the opinion that we are entered upon a period of high prices for living necessities.

This gives the farmer a double incentive to enlarge his production within the bounds of economic operation.

First of all, where much of the necessities of life are produced on the farm and are thus acquired at the cost of production, the more of the same the farmer produces the less will he feel the burden of high living costs.

In meeting this desired end both variety and quantity of production are to be given due consideration.

In the second place, the farmer's surplus over his own needs becomes a commercial commodity upon which his cash income depends.

The more his per acre yield the less his per unit cost of production and the wider his margin for profit—barring that rare occurrence when over-production spells ruin.

We say "rare occurrence" for more often a careful scrutiny of all the related circumstances will show that market manipulation or uneconomic distribution is the cause of collapsing markets and the "myth" of overproduction a scape-goat conjured up to hide the real cause.

The wider the variety of products the better security against market uncertainties, for while overproduction of one crop may upset the price of one or market manipulation another, neither is apt to affect a wide variety of all crops.

Even nature's freaks of fickle weather have been known to favor the farmer who diversifies.

So, in making sure of his own livelihood, the farmer makes sure of a profitable surplus for himself, and makes safest his God-ordained mission of feeding the world.

It is seldom we need be afraid of nature's super-abundance.

ROAD TO TAX REDUCTION.

There are two principal ways in which the cost of government may be reduced.

One way is by the elimination of unnecessary functions. The other is by cutting overhead costs through combining bureaus, doing away with overlapping of activities, etc. One is as important as the other.

Many authorities have said that it is now time to eliminate some of the current functions of government.

It is likewise advocated that the Congress pass legislation authorizing a survey of bureaus, commissions and other bodies with a view to consolidating them, and lowering personnel and other administrative costs. It is unquestionably true that cutting the red tape that today surrounds so many official activities would make government more efficient as well as less expensive.

This is all in the interest of better government and more economical government. Other units of government—state, county and local—should follow suit. It is just as wasteful to perform an essential function of government inefficiently as it is to put government into fields where it does not belong.—Industrial News Review.

oOo

The present trend of partnership between state and federal administrative agencies is not only undermining the spirit of our constitution which provides a dual system of separate and defined powers but is rapidly transforming the states into useless and unconscionably expensive fifth-wheels in the government machinery. The sooner we get back to where each system functions in its own sphere or else abolish all state governments the sooner will we have economical government. The present tendency is comparable to bobbing the dog's tail inch by inch.

Future of Our Boys And Girls on Trial

There are 45,000,000 boys and girls in the United States under eighteen years of age.

It has long been recognized that it is an American heritage for parents to rear their children without any Governmental supervision as is often the case in some foreign countries.

Do you now wish to relinquish this heritage in favor of a bureaucratic Governmental control?

If the Texas Legislature, which convenes on January 12th, ratifies the Child Labor Amendment, it will in effect mean that you relinquish many of your parental prerogatives in favor of inspectors and bureaus appointed by the Government.

These inspectors will seek to prevent your children under eighteen years of age from doing any work of any nature around the home and the farm.

What would the normal farmer do were it not for the aid of his sons in doing necessary chores around the house and on the farm?

What would the normal farmer's wife do if the daughter under seventeen years of age were prevented by Governmental agencies from assisting with the farm home's household tasks?

If you believe that you, as a parent, should be the one to decide these vital questions, write your Senator today in Austin and ask him to vote against ratification of this so-called Child Labor Amendment.
